4 O'CLOCK EDITION

Ardmore, Monday, October 3, 1904.

The Japanese war of 1904-1905 is another dark moment of our history.

The New York Sun speaks of the ending of the race issue by the Southern politicians. Though it was the Chicago platform that ruled the race issue.

The treasury department is in favor of the independent manufacturers in the cotton label case, putting the imported stamps upon the bottom of the box.

The young New Yorker who started his opponent with a lead pencil has shown that that little implement of usefulness deserves to be classed with the bar pin as a weapon of defense.

The new market for the cotton crop of 1904 will not go beyond 11,500,000 bales. Twelve cent cotton should put money into the pocket of the man who grows the heavy staple. And cotton continues king of staples.

Although 11,000 words are consumed in Mr. Roosevelt's letter of acceptance, that epistle is well described by one paragraph therein: "We intend in the future to carry on the government in the same way that we have carried it on in the past."—Bryan's Commoner.

A Missouri judge has refused a woman a divorce from her husband on the ground that he kissed the hired girl. In explaining his decision the eminent jurist said he did not propose to establish a precedent through which every married woman in the country could get a divorce.

Governor Darbin of Indiana visited New York and ascertained that the Democrats had borrowed $400,000 for use in that state. Governor Darbin is a good Republican, a party man, and he insists that the Republicans should cross over with something equally as good. There is a great campaign of education on in Indiana and teachers are demanding high salaries.

THE CURSE OF THE LOAFER.

In the number of the 10th of this month, published the 10th of this month, we would probably have had a paragraph something like this in the 10th of this month.

MASSACHUSETTS—A human eye, without masters, morals or decency, as a matter of fact, the lowest type of humanity.

The number is moved entirely by the spirit of original sinfulness. There has been no special enjoyment in his efforts. The woman who would be so easily deceived by his words and acts could only be a degraded being. But the man takes his place in front of a theater of crime and as women pass out he makes remarks entirely about their personal appearance—his own disgusting jests. Perhaps he selects a victim and follows her to a car, pouring remarks that should land him in the penitentiary into her unwilling ears.

Why doesn't she smack him in the face or complain to the policeman on the corner? A modest woman is an object of curiosity as she is of police. She doesn't want to appear in police court. She doesn't want to see her name in the newspapers in connection with such an affair. She realizes that she would have all these things for the sake of her sex, but she's shirking and timid, and the decent part of humanity loves her for those very virtues.

Why should men congregate in front of any theater or any store or hotel, if they have no business there? Why isn't it the duty of the police to request them to move on, if the actions are in any way boisterous or unusual, and enforce compliance?

There are parts of this city right in the business district where the average woman is afraid to go unattended. As one girl remarked: "The things men say to you make your blood boil. I could kill them. I do not even shop unless I have somebody older than myself with me. I would not even dream of going down town in the evening without an escort. I don't suppose those wretches who insult women would hurt me, but they have no right to even speak to me, or to any girl who is respectable, and only ask to be let alone."—Kansas City World.

A colored gentleman is running for the Republican nomination for congress in a Massachusetts district. Here's a good chance for those Eastern lovers of the colored brother to put in a vote that will show that they really mean what they preach. That negro will not be nominated this time.

For the first time you hear from Massachusetts. They want the negro to be elected and to be good as the white man, so they want him to do so in the South. When it comes to sending negroes to congress it is just the thing the South ought to have but it is another thing in Massachusetts. Human nature is human nature everywhere. The Republicans of Massachusetts would think no more of sending a colored man to congress to represent them than would the people of the South. They love the negro for his vote but when it comes to electing him to a high office at their expense that is another question.

THE COAL LANDS.

Today is the day set apart for the sale of the Indian Territory aggregated coal lands by sealed bids. Very little has been said and very little done in the premises.

It has been estimated that the coal in the Indian Territory is worth $100,000,000. There will not be any competition to speak of, between the bidders. It looks like the coal trust is out on a wild hunt, and that it is gunning for its game without attracting attention. The Indians, meanwhile, are alert and will see to it that the trust doesn't have things its own way—at least not in the transfer of coal lands. There is every reason to believe that all bids will be rejected, if it appears that the lands have been bid for at too low a price, or that they have not brought.

The business men of Ada are making an effort to have the Postal Telegraph company build a line into that bustling town to remedy the present poor service at that place.

W. P. Poland's of Ardmore defense of the grafter is a well-written article and every line of it is true. But for the alleged grafters' money that was furnished the Indian with which to buy improvements on his allotment would have taken two years to wind up the filing. The truth of the matter is the white man has made the Indian Territory what it is and it entitled to the fruits of his labor.—Mill Creek Times.

The birth of a son to the king of Italy has aroused interest in the youngest royal family in Europe. Therefore of special timely moment is Grace Hilary Channing's article on "Two Baby Princesses" in the October "Twentieth Century Home." It tells much about the home life of the Princesses Isabella and Mafalda, the little daughters of the Italian royalties. The article is well illustrated.

Are You Interested In Good Table Linens?

You Will Find Them at the ARDMORE DRY GOODS CO.

HERE is nothing which brightens up the dining room more than pretty linens. Even the most humble fare is more palatable when eaten off of clean linen. GOOD LINENS do not necessarily carry with them HIGH PRICES. The secret of high prices is big profits. Our Linens are all new and carry with them that crispy newness which is found only in the substantial grades. We believe in good Linens and were therefore very careful in selecting this line in order to GET THE VERY BEST VALUES to be had for the money. We take pleasure in convincing the skeptical. An examination of this line will reveal to you that our values are not surpassed nor our prices approached in the city.
